FLORA WINDS THE CLOCK.

A Beautiful and Novel Timepiece For California University.

A clock garden whose flowers will tell the time of day is being planned by Instructor H. A. Ousterhaut of the botanical division of the University of California. He proposes to cultivate such a garden on the University grounds arrang-ing the plants in dial form. The hours and half hours are to be indicated daily buds. The work of producing a clock garden will be a long task, as it has never been attempted in California before and a great deal of experimenting will be should be put around the circle to indicate time. The garden will be the only one of the kind in the United States. "By getting the right varieties of flowers we can mark all the hours and some of the can mark all the bours and some of the half hours throughout the day," said Mr. Ousterhout in describing the projected botanical curlosity—"The flowers would be arranged like a clock and in the early morning thay would begin to bloom, the different varieties at different periods, according to the light and heat. Gradually the opening of the blossoms would extand around the circle until at night the circle would be all in bloom. The first garden of the kind was at Upsala, Sweden, by the botanist Linneas. There is also one in Paris and efforts have been made to cultivate them in the Eastern States, but owing to the elements they have not been successful."
